LAW REPORTS

THE JERUSALEM POST
April 29, 1954

In the Supreme Court Sitting as Court of Criminal Appeal Before: Justices Olshan (Acting President), Gotsis, and Berenson The Attorney-General, Appellant v. 1. Rivka Shmiliowitz, 2. Karel Albert, 3. Shlomo Teitelbaum, Respondents. (Cr. A. 64/54)

PERJURY IN RABBINICAL COURT

The Supreme Court allowed the appeal of the Attorney-General against sentences imposed on the second and third respondents by Judge M. Harpalai of the Tel Aviv District Court on January 24, 1954. (Cr. C. 127/53). The appeal against the sentence of the first respondent was withdrawn in the course of the proceedings. Rivka Shmiliowitz came to Israel a few years ago, together with her small daughter. Her husband, Isadore Cohen, who had deserted her, remained in Rumania. In Israel, Mrs. Cohen, who used her maiden name of Shmiliowitz, struggled very hard to make ends meet and bring up her daughter. She saw a solution to her problems and an end to her sorry plight when Karel Albert, also a new immigrant, offered to marry her.

The prospective bride and groom applied to the Rabbinate for permission to marry, the witness declaring that she was a spinster of 38 and had never been married previously. Albert testified that he had known Rivka Shmiliowitz since her youth and that she was unmarried. His testimony was backed up by that of Shlomo Teitelbaum. When enquiries were made on behalf of the Rabbinate, it was discovered that Isadore Cohen, Rivka Shmiliowitz's legally wedded husband and the father of her child, was still alive in Rumania and that his wife had known it all along.

Before District Court

The three respondents were charged before the Tel Aviv District Court with knowingly giving false testimony and were found guilty of perjury according to Section 117 (1) of the Criminal Code Ordinance, which lays down a maximum sentence of seven years.

Judge Harpalai, in delivering judgment, declared that perjury was an offence against the very foundations of law and justice and ought to be severely punished. It only to educate the citizen. But punishment should not only fit the crime; it should also fit the perpetrator of the crime. The Judge felt that as the woman had perjured herself in order to find a solution to her tragic situation and as her fellow-conspirators had acted under the best of intentions, in the case of the would-be bridegroom, and with the most altruistic motives, in the case of Teitelbaum, the three accused should be let off lightly. He, therefore, sentenced Rivka Shmiliowitz to two days' imprisonment, Albert to five days and Teitelbaum to two days. In addition, he bound over all three to be of good behaviour for a year.

MEMORIAL MEETING

Wingate Lecture On Man and Ethics

Jerusalem Post Reporter

In his opening lecture of the third series of the Hebrew University Order Wingate Memorial Lectures on Tuesday, Dr. Paul Weiss, Professor of Philosophy at Yale University, outlined various problems of ethics and the relation of ethics to religion. In enumerating the serious difficulties which ethics must overcome, the one that Prof. Weiss concentrated on was that while man ought to do what is absolutely right, no man has the power or knowledge to do so. Mrs. Lorna Wingate's mother, Mrs. Monier-Wedderburn, was present in a large audience including many of the Hebrew University faculty and student body. In introducing the lecture, Professor Weiss welcomed Mrs. Paterson and read from a letter from Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, who had contributed to the Memorial Lecture fund.

US Arms Shipments to Arab States Violates 3-Power Pact

Commenting on the Government statement on the supply of American arms to Israel, "Habor" (General Zionist) asks how America would react if some third party sent equipment and weapons in considerable quantities to the North Koreans. The supply of arms violates the 1950 understanding of the three Western powers because it is impossible to guarantee present frontiers while at the same time encouraging aggressive tendencies. As for the British announcement welcoming the American arms supplies, the paper calls it a case of "active appeasement."

"Peace Movement"

"Al Hamishma" (Mapam) stresses the important tasks of the Israel "peace movement" in the present hour. It should warn the whole world against the intrigues of the Arab feudal governments supported by American imperialism which wish to unleash a new war in the Middle East. "Habor" (Agudat Yisrael extremists) demands in its editorial that our dependence on America should not be a movement of protest, but among other things, in order to show the Arab countries that their political calculations are very wrong indeed. "Habor" calls for emergency measures to forestall a new Middle Eastern Munich in view of the anti-Israel turn in American policy and of Arab aggression on all fronts.

"Ha'reiz"

(Independent) comments on the report from Rishon Le Zion that the municipal security committee there was only dissolved in 1953 though according to government decisions all the institutions of Hagana should have been liquidated much earlier, and asks the speedy intervention of the state comptroller.

Tuition Fees

On the occasion of the presentation of degrees to the Hebrew University graduates, "Hamash" (Progressive) writes on the difficult economic situation of the institutions of higher learning in Israel. The paper believes that an increase in the tuition fee will not solve the problem, and that both the Government and the public will have to be informed of the seriousness of the situation and the necessity of an extra effort.

"Histradrut"

(World Mizrahi Union) wants to know why the May Day demonstrations have not been postponed to another date in order to prevent profaning the Sabbath. "Histradrut" mentions a series of other recent incidents which all make it imperative to intensify the struggle for Sabbath observance. For the first time in many years "Kol Ha'am" (Communist) admits a mistake. The paper announced that "Al Hamishma" had published a "Pravda" news item (reprinted from an Egyptian newspaper) about alleged British bases in Israel. Stressing the importance of preparing young experts, "Dav'ar" (Histradrut) reports about the activities of the new agricultural scholarship fund established by the Agricultural Workers' Association.

Number 25, 1954 - 25th April 1954

MR. Bruce McDaniel, who has been completing his tour of duty as head of the United States Operations Mission in Israel, will take with him on his return to his home country not only the warm regard of the many persons he met in every walk of life during his stay here, but also the sense of a mighty task honourably and brilliantly discharged and a feeling that in a world in which so much energy is given over to the preparation and the wreaking of destruction, he has assisted in great measure in building the new economy of a new country to a stage where some degree of viability now begins to appear on the horizon.

The story of the United States Operations Mission, known alphabetically as USOM, is in essence, to quote a recent report, the "Israeli technician and the technician from the United States working together day by day deciding the most beneficial use of ... the dollars and pounds which will carry Israel further along the road towards her goal of stability, freedom and economic independence."

The people of the United States, a few years ago, had decided through their Congress to assist by mutual cooperation those nations requiring assistance for the purpose of stabilizing their economies and strengthening their independence. Israel was included in the scheme, and the first Grant-in-Aid amounting to $67,767,000 was authorized for the fiscal year 1951-52. This was followed by a second grant of $72,979,000 for the following year and a further grant of $52.5m. for the third year of the scheme.

The result was that vital commodities which Israel lacked and without which she could not have progressed began to pour into the country, but even more important in the long-term view, although the amounts involved were smaller, was the scheme of Technical Assistance which accompanied the Grant-in-Aid. Under these schemes, the Israel Government was helped in planning agriculture, public health and administration, communications, retraining of unskilled workers, education in general, manpower usage and many other vital branches of the life of the State. Experts were brought here in order to advise and guide local technicians, and an ambitious programme of sending Israeli technicians abroad to learn the latest methods has also been undertaken.

This vast undertaking was directed at first by Mr. McDaniel and is now an efficient and vital factor in Israel's progress. He has set high standards, worthy of the qualities which his successor will bring to his task.

ACCORDING to reports emanating from the World Jewish Congress, a new series of trials of Zionist and Jewish communal leaders is now taking place in Rumania, and some savage sentences have already been promulgated for the alleged offences of Zionist activities and propaganda, organizing illegal emigration and contacting the Israel Legation in Bucharest.

It had been hoped that after the reversal of the verdicts in the case of the Moscow doctors last year, the anti-Zionist, anti-Jewish trend in the Iron Curtain countries had been reversed. The contrary seems to be the case. The only difference now would lie in the fact that the drive against Zionist and Jewish leaders who failed to toe a party line in Jewish affairs, although being accompanied with a quiet and cold ferocity is as yet unaccompanied by the anti-Jewish, anti-Zionist propaganda of former trials.

This does not hide the fact that decent men and women are being bitterly persecuted for their convictions and must only batten the impression that the regimes which resort to such methods are far less stable than they would have the world believe.

Three-Sided Struggle For Power in Rumania

By DANIEL NORMAN

LONDON (AP)—The three-cornered struggle for power among Rumania's Communist leaders now seems to have settled at least in part and for the time being.

As a result of the plenary meeting of the Central Committee of the Rumanian Communist Party on April 13, the principle of Party and Government leadership laid down by Malenkov after Stalin's death has now been put into practice in Rumania, as it had already in other satellite countries. Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej has given up the General-Secretaryship of the Party, retaining only the position of Premier.

In accordance with the new formula of "collective leadership," a new secretariat of four has been created, whose task is to deal only with Party affairs under the supervision of the Politburo. The Vice-Premier and Minister of Agriculture, Gheorghe Apostol, has been promoted to be alternate member of the Politburo.

Members of the secretariat are: Nicolae Ceausescu, an army general who has hitherto been only an alternate member of the Politburo; Mihail Dales, the Rumanian Ambassador in Moscow; and Janos Avaszas, a deputy from the Hungarian Autonomous region.

Generals Promoted—Alexandru Moghioros, one of the former Party secretaries, who has lost the post of Vice-Premier, has been promoted to be alternate member of the Politburo.

Members of the Politburo, while Mihail Myle, General Mihail Rostan, and Janos Farkas have been promoted to alternate members of the Central Committee.

It would be a mistake to consider that Gheorghiu-Dej's position has been weakened by these changes. Although he has had to give up the functions of Party Secretary, the new Party appointments show that he is still the master. Indeed, the four new secretaries are all his men and the first secretary, Apostol, is his closest friend, with whom he has worked hand-in-glove since the 'thirties.

Moreover, the opponents of Dej in the secretariat, Kleinewald and Moghioros, have been eliminated and given only honorary positions in the government as Vice-Premiers. Their Jewish origin and the "Rumanization" of the Central Committee which is taking place underline the racial tendency which had already appeared in 1952, which included the fall of Ana Pauker, the former Foreign Minister.

In this respect, it is noteworthy that although the latest change shows clearly that Ana Pauker's efforts to recover her former positions have failed, there is no indication that she is not still, at least on paper, a member of the Party Central Committee. However, latest reports indicate she will shortly be indicted in another "bourgeois trial."

Gheorghiu-Dej's victories appear to be the result of a detouring in Moscow between Malenkov and the Soviet army leaders in view of the promotion of the general in the Rumanian hierarchy. But it cannot be considered as definitive. The fact that the Party Congress, originally due to be held in 1954, has now been fixed for October 30 leaves time for a continuation of the struggle for power. In the interval, economic difficulties and a failure of the new policy could give Moscow sufficient reasons to change its mind.

MR. PALDI seems to grow younger with each new exhibition, more youthful, more vigorous and more playful. He appears to have said to himself "painting can be great fun, and I intend to enjoy myself in my own way." His own way, as shown in the present exhibition at the Chemerinsky Gallery (Gordon Street) is mostly in the non-figurative manner with the accent on colour, and occasionally he achieves delightful results which convey his own enjoyment to the spectator. He has some charming canvases based on marine and flower subjects with highly decorative harmonies linked with amusing design. Lilacs, greens, yellows, purples are woven into an iridescent carpet of colour.

But such works form but a small part of the exhibition. Most of the paintings are more in the nature of "reliefs" in colour, with great, thick ridges of paint, and a few of the textured, few distinguished by an interest of composition. Most of them are reminiscent of over-decorated canvases, in yet other words, Paldi amuses himself to end with bits of string and horsehair applied to primitive portraits. But it is many years since the reviewer found satisfaction in this type of humour.

ON COMING HOME

It is not always better to travel than to arrive. A southerly maxim may be — "East West, Home's best." East, when it means Israel, still offers the utmost thrill, no matter how full of interest the wayfarer, or of nostalgia here for Anglo-Saxons revisiting the West.

For Israel apart from its ageless aura, is constantly changing. New features appear almost daily, and their impact on the homeward after an absence of half-a-year can be startling.

Surprises met me in the spheres of material phenomena. The country looked larger, fuller. Its green patches were more lush with productivity, whether or not due to some climatic factor. The desert scrub has yielded to more churned-up soil, enclosures, the seething hive of Tel Aviv spreads further outwards, and the pine-clad slopes of Carmel sprout unsightly clumps of boxy buildings. Development everywhere — and general good cheer, despite the gloomish prognostications of disunity and collapse. More people in the streets in shops and buses, in cinema and concert halls, though fares, tickets, and printed-matter have trebled with rents and rates, while the prices of food, clothing, and domestic articles have soared so high as to seem beyond the reach of the homeward-bound who yet buy — and pay.

Pavement Food — It is the plethora of goods that amazes — especially the food, so scarce in the period before we went away. No longer are there queues at the green-grocer's. Other shops are stocked with other things long-missed or never seen at all: tinned and packaged provisions, imported and home produced; trade tools and household equipment from electric gadgets to nails and toilet-paper; luxury items, cosmetics and jewellery and glass, china, and silverware, frocks, suits, accessories, shoes, in unusual profusion and variety. They are not all "reparation" goods. Most remarkable are the ubiquitous pavement hawkers, openly offering for sale to passers-by in the main streets and squares, wares hitherto unobtainable even by limited scrip coupons. The prices seem fantastic, but everything is bought, apparently by ordinary housewives. When I
